Economy Claims Proven

A COMPARISON of the financial status of the government at the close of the fiscal year, June 30, with former years furnishes a complete substantiation of the republican claim to economy in national expenditures and to a marked increase of efficiency in keeping the government's accounts. Congressman Martin B. Madden, of Illinois, chairman of the house appropriations committee, has submitted to his colleagues the actual figures of what the republicans have accomplished have accomplished. The total appropriations for 1922 were $4,066,000,000 and those for 1923, $3,747,000,000, showing a reduction of $319,000,000. These figures are impressive enough, but the fact is that shortly after the beginning of the fiscal year 1922 the treasury estimated that the expenditures for that year would reach $4,554,000,000. At the end of the year it was found that they had actually amounted to but $3,795,000,000, a direct and actual saving of $759,000,000, due solely to the budget system and the determination of President Harding and the republican congress to make every possible saving in the taxpayers' money. By the application of the same methods of retrenchment, it is expected that even the appropriations for 1923, reduced as they are, will be left with unexpended balances at the end of the year.

The most marked reduction in the appropriations this year under those of last is in the line of national defense. For 1922, the military and naval appropriations totaled $763,000,000, while for 1923 they are $550,000,000, a saving of $213,000,000. Much of that economy is directly due to the results of the Washington conference called by President Harding to reduce naval armaments.

In spite of the most rigid economy revealed by those figures, big reductions in the national debt have been achieved. At the beginning of the fiscal year 1922 the debt stood at $23,977,000,000, and at the end of the year it had dropped to $22,963,000,000, a reduction of $1,014,000,000.

The object aimed at by the republicans in thus cutting expenditures to the bone was a reduction in the tax burden on the people. As soon as the economies were put into effect they were translated into reduced taxes, and during the calendar year 1921 $80,000,000 is estimated to have been saved the taxpayers. In the present calendar year the total savings to the people in taxes will reach $850,000,000. Further savings of the same sort will follow in succeeding years. It has been the effort of certain partisan democrats to compare expenditures for the fiscal year 1923 with those for pre-war years to show that republicans have failed in their promised return to normalcy. How unfair such a comparison is may be shown by a tabulation of some of the increased costs of government that cannot be avoided.

This Year	Pre-War Year
Interest on public debt $23,000,000	$975,000,000
Debt retirement funds.....	60,000,000
Pensions.....	158,000,000
Veteran's Bureau.....	418,000,000
Shipping Board.....	100,000,000
Postal Service.....	324,000,000
Internal Revenue Service.....	4,000,000
	60,000,000

Not one of these increased expenditures can be escaped if the honor of the government are to be maintained.

SLOGANNING

THE recent announcement by the city commission of Phoenix of a million dollar budget, which means an increase of taxes somewhere between ten and fifteen per cent, is the cause of considerable embarrassment to Mr. H. H. McCalla, state democratic chairman and platform maker.

The last city election was regarded as a tremendous victory for the democrats, for though city elections are supposed to be non-partisan affairs, nevertheless the democratic politicians went about bragging that they had captured the city hall political situation and that it would be a big factor in determining the outcome of the general election in the fall.

The new members of the commission were elected on a pledge that they would cut taxes. Instead they have raised them a considerable notch higher than they ever were before, and this in the face of McCalla's new democratic platform with its "down-with-taxes" plank.

If Mr. McCalla is really sincere about cutting down taxes why does he not use a little portion of his great political powers with his home-town administration, the local taxpayers are wondering. If he can't influence his own fellow democrats who control the city administration, what hope is there that he could control the state officials, assuming that the state administration is turned over to the democrats? Is another little point that McCalla is dodging.

Again, what has McCalla done toward influencing his fellow democrats on county boards of supervisors, who these days are especially active in increasing county tax burdens? County taxes were boosted ten per cent last year, and this despite the fact that the state voted half a million dollars additional for schools. The majority of these boards are under democratic control.

NO HOPE FOR BRITAIN

GREAT BRITAIN is facing another crisis. The tailors of Tooley street once almost rebelled, now the tailors of the metropolis, as represented by their official organ, are angry. It is not because of slow progress in restoring pre-war conditions; it is not because of dissatisfaction with the outcome at Genoa, or the lack of any definite outcome at The Hague. It is more deep-seated than that. It is about as deep-seated as the seat of the cabinet trousers. The Tailor and Cutter, edited by a sartorial expert, the "Beau-nash" of the English capital, doesn't like the costuming of the cabinet, and is sure something should be done about it. Hear the editor rave.

"We must confess we were disappointed and slightly astonished at the Premier's choice of clothes for the occasion," says the Tailor and Cutter, commenting on the recent conference with President Poincare.

"A light gray suit does not strike us as the correct wear for a gathering which has a certain amount of formality. He has tried to be a dandy, but restlessness and adiposity will keep breaking through."

The rest of the cabinet is just as sharply criticized. "The Earl of Balfour's tie and collar suggested a Methodist parson," we are told, and "Winston Churchill's waistcoat is not a fashionable addition," and so on through the list.

Carry the news to Ireland. Decadence is at hand, the disintegration of the empire has set in, but what, we ask, would the Tailor and Cutter do if it had a William Jennings Bryan in the cabinet?

PUT AND TAKE

"Put and take" in terms of living

Is no kin to gambling when

"Put" means just the cheerful giving

Of your aid to fellow men.

PUT into the hands of others

Business lessons you have learned,

TAKE then from your helpful brothers

Only aid which you have earned.

We all have one destination,

Common goods we seek to make;

Greatest is the compensation,

If we PUT more than we TAKE:

NOT BY A DAM SITE

"The cut on our front page shows the splendid possibilities of the Colorado river project. The Colorado damsite is Arizona's greatest asset."

And the cut on "Uncle" John's first page is a picture of Chas. B. Ward, democratic nominee (Toosoon) for governor. Uncle John has his assets and liabilities badly mixed.—Coconino Sun.

The latest report from Berlin declaring that Germany is about to go into voluntary bankruptcy also carried the news that papers had suspended publication. That is probably because all the paper has gone into the making of marks.
